Quietly Preparing to Worship God

Everyone

Please take a moment to silence your cell phones

There are one hundred fifty of them, but Psalm 23 is the one. We know it. We can recite it. And most who recite it will use the 17th century “leadeth” and “restoreth” and “maketh.” In just six lines, this Psalm says something that always seems to comfort us. And the reason that it is so comforting is that it points us beyond ourselves, it points us beyond our circumstances, and it points us toward God. It points us to a God who is protective and giving. It points us to a God who keeps us safe. This Psalm points us to a God who leads us down the right path. It reminds us that comfort comes from God. That “even though I am walking through this dark valley, I will not allow fear to consume me.” Psalm 23 is the one.

Psalm 23 is the one we know, the one we remember, but this action of pointing us to God is the foundation of many of the Psalms, it is the task of much of scripture. And in worship, our hymns do the same thing. As do our prayers. Our silence. It is all to point us to God. May Psalm 23 remind us and reorient us as we begin worship today. Allow your gaze, your hope, your attention, and your devotion be directed to our Good Shepherd.

Praise the Lord. Give thanks for God's goodness.

God's steadfast love endures forever.

Happy are those who observe justice,

Who rejoice always, and whose gentleness is known to all.

Happy are those who do righteousness at all times.

Save us, O Lord, and gather us from among the nations, that we may give thanks to your holy name, and glory in your praise.

Come and worship God!
